

Roaming with the iPhone

We all know that when you go overseas you want to be able to use your iPhone in much the same way as you do when you are at home in New Zealand. When you take your iPhone overseas, you are roaming and different charges apply to your plan.

If you make use of all of the great features of the iPhone like checking emails, browsing the web and downloading apps, your data usage will add up so we want to be clear that you understand what drives your usage

We have three options that will help you manage your iPhone data roaming charges when you are overseas:

- 1) Managing iPhone Email
- 2) Turn off Data Roaming
- 3) Reduce your Data usage

iPhone Email

The iPhone is constantly checking your inbox and downloading emails without you having to do anything. When you are roaming overseas, this may use a lot of data.

We know how important it is to get emails on your iPhone, so here are a couple of suggestions for how to keep costs down when checking your emails overseas.

Reduce the number of active email accounts

If you have several email accounts set up on your iPhone, you may wish to temporarily deactivate these while you're roaming overseas. Reducing the number of email accounts being checked will reduce your data roaming bill.

To do this:

- Tap the Settings Icon:

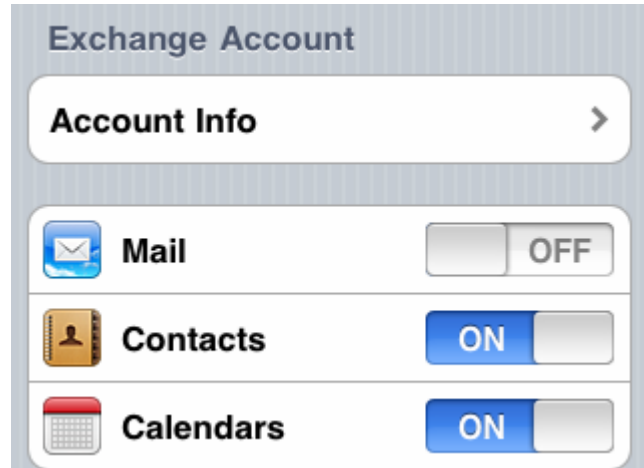

- Tap the Mail, Contacts, Calendars item :

You will then be presented with a list of email accounts along with further mail setting options.

- Tap the account you wish to temporarily deactivate
- Slide the Mail slider to OFF

Turn Off Push Email, use fetch instead.

The iPhone automatically checks your inbox and downloads emails including attachments which may lead to large roaming charges. A good way to continue receiving emails, but not have your iPhone regularly checking for them, is to switch your phone on to fetch mode. When you tap into emails on your home screen the iPhone will check for them, but only when you want to – not at regular intervals.

To switch for fetch mode on your iPhone:

- Tap the Settings Icon:

- Tap the Mail, Contacts, Calendars item :

You will then be presented with a list of email accounts, along with further mail setting options.

- Tap Fetch New Data

- Slide the Push Slider to OFF

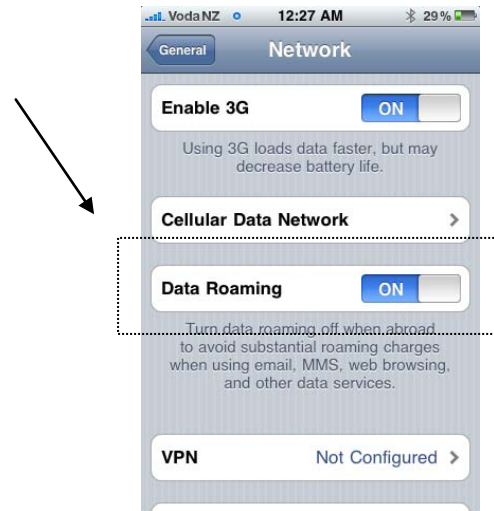

- Tap Manually

Turn Off Data Roaming

If you don't intend to use any data while you are roaming overseas, you could turn your data roaming feature off. You will still be able to call and TXT but you will not be able to use any data like email and facebook.

To turn off your iPhone's data connection when the phone is roaming, do the following:

- Tap the Settings button
- Tap the General option
- Tap the Network option
- Slide the Data Roaming slider to Off

Other Helpful Tips

- If you open emails and view attachments, the iPhone email app shows you the KB or MB size of the attachment (the larger the size of the attachment, the more expensive it will be).
- Downloading iPhone Apps can significantly increase your data usage. Apps can be large and Vodafone recommends you download any apps you might need before travelling.
