Access Type	Fibre Actual max user speeds will vary and are affected by various factors including how you're connected to the internet (using a Gigabit Ethernet cable is better than WiFi, which could have a large impact on speed), the hardware and software used, number of devices connected, time of day, and where the data is downloaded from. FibreX FibreX is a hybrid fibre coaxial network that uses fibre cabling to the local area and coaxial cabling to the home. The FibreX Max plan is the fastest connection available on Vodafone's superfast Gigabit network. But, "Gigabit" describes the network speed capability, and not the actual speed you will experience. Actual user speeds will vary and are affected by various factors including how you're connected to the internet (using a Gigabit Ethernet cable is better than WiFi, which could have a large impact on speed), the hardware and software used, number of devices connected, time of day, and where the data is downloaded from. Effects on other services	FibreX – traditional fixed line calling Your broadband requires mains power to operate. If power is not available (e.g. during a local power outage) the broadband, and any services which run over it, may stop working unless you have battery backup in your home. VDSL, Fibre and FibreX - voice calling over broadband Your broadband requires mains power to operate. If power is not available (e.g. during a local power outage) the broadband, and any services which run over it including voice calling, including telephone calls to Emergency 111 services, may stop working unless you have battery backup in your home. Services that require a traditional fixed phone line to work, such as monitored medical or home alarms, fax machines, or the interactive features of Sky Digital are incompatible with voice calling over broadband. Vodafone recommend checking with your provider if you have any existing phone dependent services.
